EXCELLENT SCHOOL MEETING FRIDAY.

Superintendent Pile Succeeds in Having a Splendid Program

Rendered For The Teachers Of Breckenridge.

MRS. CHAS. WEAVER SPEAKS.

The meeting arranged by Superintendent Joel H. Pile for the teachers, trustees and people of Breckenridge county was an enthusiastic, a successful and profitable one. The secret of it was "School Improvement" and it was well brought out and emphasized in all the addresses.

As many as 80 teachers, if not more, were present. The morning was devoted to the business affairs of the County School Board and the afternoon was given over to the speakers. Pres. Cherry, John P. Haswell, Jesse Whitworth and Mrs. Chas. Weaver, of Louisville, being among them.

As a result of the day's work a District School Improvement League was organized with the following officers: J. H. Pile, president; Miss Nell Mooman, vice president; Mr. Driskill, secretary and treasurer; Miss Willie Chambers Press committee.

Some of the ideas expressed in Mrs. Weaver's address were along the following lines:

We cannot expect our children to do good work in school unless they are well. We cannot expect them to be well unless the building where they spend five or six hours every day is clean, comfortable and perfectly sanitary.

We cannot expect children to do good work in school unless they love school. They will not love school unless it is worth loving. A dilapidated, cheerless school commands the respect of neither pupil nor parent. We can easily keep our children in school by making it beautiful. There is not only a mental but a moral stimulus in beautiful surroundings. To accomplish its best work therefore, the school must be attractive.

HAD EXPERIENCE WITH NIGHT RIDERS

E. C. McDonald, who arrived here last Thursday to spend the week ending with his sister, Mrs. Frank Mattingly, left Monday morning to enter upon his medical work at the University of Louisville. Mr. McDonald has been in Tennessee for several weeks and was in the midst of night-riding which occurred there October, the twentieth. He was at Ward's Hotel the night before Col. Taylor and Capt. Rankin were taken from there by the night riders. One place where he spent the night the riders came to the hotel and made the proprietor give them possession of his store where they got enough matches and coal oil to burn ten of his tenant houses. "The situation of affairs in Tennessee is dreadful," says Mr. McDonald. He was also threatened for employing a negro driver in one town, but when he gave them to understand that he was from Kentucky, they did not bother him. Mr. McDonald ate dinner with Ex-Senator Carmack the day before he was shot and killed by Cooper.

Ben Bates Writes.

Dear Editor: Enclosed find 25 cents. Send me the News for 3 months. I feel lost without the paper as I see in it all that is going on at home.

My wife has just returned from Kentucky where she has spent 4 weeks visiting. She states that things are awful dry back there. Well we are having fine weather here and people are busy getting in their corn. A man goes out here and gets 80 Bushels per day at 4 per cent a bushel and board making him a good day's wages. This is a fine country. One man can tend more land here, than 6 can there. John Hall tends one hundred acres and gets along by himself. You never walk to work here. I see wagons coming to town with as much as 1,500 bushels of wheat and corn at one load of course they are 4 horses. I would love to be in Cloverport long enough to take a good hunt with a con dog as there is none in this country.

HARVEY WATTERSON

Burial in Cave Hill—Messages of Condolence Received From National and State Notables.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 14.—The body of Harvey Watterson was laid to rest in Cave Hill cemetery. The tragedy of last Wednesday has cast a gloom over many homes, both in New York and Louisville.

Over a thousand messages of condolence from all parts of the country have reached Mr. and Mrs. Henry Watterson. These came not only from relatives and friends, but from many sympathizers who were personally unknown.

Not a few of these messages came from party adversaries, including members of the cabinet, the managers of the national Republican campaign and most of the leading Republicans of Kentucky.

To these especially Mr. and Mrs. Watterson wish to return their grateful acknowledgments.

MRS. LUCIA ANN TUCKER.

A character that has been pure and beautiful ever since she played in the mountains of Vermont, is Mrs. Lucia Ann Tucker. In the year of 1843 she came to Kentucky with her husband and though there were many shadows cast around their family hearth during the Civil War, her heart was never darkened with hard feelings toward the South-

His First Vote For Taft.

During a lull in the voting at Havesville precinct election day a funny little experience occurred. The judges were A. Freeman and M. Stephens, and each are always ready for a little mirth. A small boy, probably less than ten years old, came rushing into the polling place and announced that he was ready to vote. In order to make the joke complete they secured one of the sample ballots on yellow paper, stood him up in a chair and told him to fire away. He told them he would prefer that some one would vote for him, and this was just what the judges wanted, for they were anxious to find out how the young man proposed to "save the country." When everything was in readiness he announced that Taft was good enough for him, and the ballot was so marked. The little fellow departed, his name unknown to any of the officers, and he no doubt thinks he helped in a substantial way to cut down that ten thousand majority against Taft in Kentucky. —Hancock Clarion.

In Loving Remembrance Of Two Little Brothers.

Franklin Arnold, who died Nov. 19, 1908, and John Wilford Ruddell, April 2, 1908, beloved children of John and Lillian Ridge.

We had a little treasure once He was our joy and pride, We loved him, oh! perhaps too well, For soon he slept and died.

But since then, another little lamb has gone To dwell with him who gave; Another little darling child is sheltered in the grave.

Two little angels now on high They hand in hand together roam, Two little now glad as to the sky, Two fingers beckon us to come.

Those little lips so sweet to kiss, Are closed forever now; Those sweet blue eyes that shone so bright, Are closed and hidden from our sight.

CHAPTER XXI.

DAVID CABLE lost no time in hurrying away from Chicago with his wife and Jane. They were whisked westward in a private car on the second day after the Bansemer exposure. Broken spirit, Jane acquiesced in all their plans. She seemed as one in a stupor, comprehending just uncomprehendingly the pain that enveloped her.

"I can't see any one that I know here," she said listlessly. "Oh, the thought of what they are saying! They did not tell her that Graydon had enlisted as a private soldier in the United States army. Jane only knew that she loved him and that he had enlisted."

Cable's devotion to her was beautiful. He could not have been more tender had she been his own daughter instead of his wife's sister.

Jane was ill in Pasadena for many weeks. Her depressed condition made her recovery doubtful. It was plain to two persons at least, that she did not care whether she lived or died. The physicians were puzzled, but no explanation was offered by the doctors. It was not until certain Chicago journalists generously spread the news that the cause of her breakdown became apparent to the good doctors. Before many days the girl who sat wan and distrustful upon the flower shaded piazza was an object of curiosity to fashionable Pasadena. As soon as she was strong enough to endure the trip the hunted trio forsook Pasadena and fled northward.

San Francisco afforded relief in privacy. Jane's spirits began to revive. There had not been war there either to any mention of that terrible night and its revelations. That she may have felt and suffered in secret could only be conjectured by those who loved her. Bansemer's name was never uttered. His fate remained unknown to her. The faraway, unhappy look in her eyes proved to them that Graydon was never out of her thoughts.

David Cable was in Chicago when Mrs. Cable received word from her sister, once Kate Coleman, that she soon would reach San Francisco with her husband, General of the Philippines. Kate was the wife of a West Pointer who had achieved the rank of colonel in the volunteers by virtue of political necessity. His regiment had been ordered to the islands, and she was accompanying him with their daughter, a girl of sixteen.

Colonel Harbin had seen pleasant service at the eastern posts, where his wife had attained a certain kind of social distinction in the army fast set. She was not without a certain claim to the prospect ahead of her in the Philippines. But the new colonel was a strict disciplinarian on and off the field. He expected to be a brigadier general if fortune and favoritism supported him long enough. Mrs. Harbin could never be anything more than a private in the ranks, so far as her estimation of distinction was concerned. Her daughter, Ethel, had, by means of a few points ahead of her in the Philippines, might have ranked as sergeant in the family corps.

Mrs. Harbin played cards, drank highballs, flirted with the younger officers, got talked about with pleasing emphasis and was as happy as any subordinate could be. They had not even thought of such a thing as divorce, and the whole army wondered and expressed disgust. The army's appetite for scandal is surpassed only by its bravery. It is not even hinted that the latter is welcomed as a loophole for the former. War brings peace.

The arrival of the Harbins and a staff of young cadets fresh from the banks of the Hudson put new life into the recruits. The regiment was to remain at the Presidio for several weeks before sailing. One of the lieutenants was a Chicago boy and an acquaintance of Graydon Bansemer. It was from him that Jane learned that her sweetheart was a soldier in the service, doubtless now in Luzon.

A week before the sailing of Colonel Harbin's transport Jane suddenly announced that she had but one desire on earth, and that was to go to Manila with her aunt. She did not present her plea with a usual claim that she wanted to be of service to her country. She was not asking to go out as a heroine of the ordinary type. Instead she simply announced that she wanted to go as a temporary member of Colonel Harbin's family, to endure their hardships and to enjoy their enthusiasm. Mrs. Cable recognized the true motive, however.

Her pleadings were in vain. The Harbins had luckily urged Jane to join them. Telegrams were sent forth across the continent, and David Cable came on to present his feeble objections.

When the great transport sailed across Jane Cable was one of her passengers. In any event, it took a long time to these camps before they could get back to the States, and she was worth while.

Perhaps the most devoted admirer was Lieutenant Bray. Good looking and coming from an excellent southern family, he was a great favorite with all. Jane liked him better than any of the rest. She would have liked him still better had he been able to resist a tendency to boast of the stock from which he had sprung. The knowledge of her disadvantages in life, the contrast between their respective positions, all tended to emphasize the irony of fate, and she often found herself wondering how the spring of true romance would conduct himself if he discovered that, after all, she was only a foundling.

It was Lieutenant Bray who made inquiries at general headquarters and found, after considerable trouble, that Graydon Bansemer's company was in the most south, subject to the requirements of a private soldier in the United States army. Jane only knew that she loved him and that he had enlisted."

QUEEN TELEGRAPH POLES.

Made of Ash in Bolivia—Grows
Traces Used in Africa.

The most original telegraph pole in the world has been found in the hills of Bolivia. In this part of Bolivia there are no growing trees, and wood is so difficult to find that even the ordinary telegraph lines are made of iron. The Queen telegraph poles are made of wood, but are dried and of solid.

So when the war broke out between Chile and Peru, and a telegraph became urgent it was made that was chosen for the Queen telegraph poles in existence. These poles were built on stone foundations and measured about five feet square at the base, with a height of about fifteen feet.

They were placed at intervals of about 300 feet, and the wire was at a height sufficient to clear the only animals of the country, the llama and the donkey. The total length of the line was 150 miles.

Among other curious telegraph lines is the growing pole line erected in Uganda by an English engineer, who not only did not use wood, but would withstand the white ants and hit upon the idea of transporting growing bark cloth trees to the sides of the roads and using them as poles.

In the Dutch East Indies growing trees are turned to account also, for there a wire is stretched across the country, and the trees on either side and the insulator is suspended in its middle, and the line is thus over the road and clear from vegetation. —Chicago Tribune.

WHY DID THE REPUBLICANS WIN?

The Republican party carried the country because it had a good record, capable leaders and a policy which met the approbation of a large majority of thinking, progressive, public-spirited Americans. And in every one of these particulars the Democracy was fatally weak. The Republican party is a little over half a century old. Except for two short interruptions, it has governed the country for forty-eight years. During that time it has seen the country multiply more than two and a half times in its wealth. The comfort, the prosperity and the general advancement of its people have been wonderful. The country's prestige and influence have increased to a degree of which nobody at the outset in the career of the Republican party dreamed. And even its blindest and most bigoted enemies know that in all this progress and expansion the legislation of the Republican party bore a prominent part.

What it did for the country's advancement in the past it is repeating now and, under the administration of President Taft, it will continue to repeat. Here are the reasons why the great mass of intelligent Americans stand with the Republican party. Here are the reasons why they have just given their magnificent tribute of confidence to the party, and why they have started it out on a new career of usefulness to the country. Even the youngest of the voters who went to the polls two days ago remembers the excellent work for the country which the party has done in the past few years. Its national irrigation act, its amendment to the interstate commerce act of 1887, its meat inspection, pure food, antitrust, employers, liability and child labor laws have all won the country's plaudits. The Republican party enacted the legislation by which the Panama Canal is being built, and through which the benefits to the country will be large. It has started a movement which will conserve the national resources and halt the destruction of the great basins of wealth. It is shaping a policy which will result in giving deep-water communication between the Gulf of Mexico and the lakes, which will make every important town on its course—Chicago, St. Louis, Memphis, New Orleans and others—seaports, and which has for its ultimate purpose the improvement of every navigable stream in the country. These are all measures of practical policy. All of these are the work of the past five or six years. All are within the easy recollection of every person who is old enough to vote. The wise and patriotic policy which this programme covers is an evidence that the party which accomplished it, or which has started it on foot, is the party which the country needs to retain in office. As the country gets larger its needs will grow greater, and the duty of every public-spirited citizen to give the Republican party his support becomes more and more urgent.

In the campaign which has just closed the Republican party was beset by difficulties of unusual dimensions. The panic, the fear of negro defection and the assaults made by some of the labor union chiefs conspired to hamper it throughout the campaign. The rule has been that the party in power during a financial convulsion will be beaten in the ensuing election. The Republicans were not responsible for the industrial stagnation of the past twelve months, but the Democrats charged it to them, and counted confidently on winning the election as a consequence. Attempts were made by Democratic demagogues to show that the Democracy would be a better friend of the black man than the Republican party has been. Charges of Republican hostility to labor were made during the campaign with a frequency and a reckless disregard for truth which were relied on to turn the scale in the great industrial centers. These obstacles were easily overcome by the Republicans. In the face of as malignant and mendacious an opposition as the country has ever seen the Republican party has won a conspicuous triumph. The prospects point to a longer period of sway for the Republicans now than they had during the civil war and reconstruction days. In the congressional field the Republicans have already, in unbroken duration, beaten the record of those days. The sixteen years of complete sway in both branches of Congress which the Republicans have gained surpasses anything in the history of the Republicans and Democrats in the past. Its four successive elections of a president is below the record of the party's earlier days, but there is a fair prospect that many other elections of Republicans will follow. The business of legislation becomes increasingly important as the country expands in population and in the volume and the variety of its industries, and this condition demands an especial intelligence in selecting a party which will deal wisely with the new problems. Here is why the Republican party was chosen. The country did a grand day's work for itself on November 3. St. Louis Globe Democrat.

Secretary Root in a recent address to the students of Hamilton College, N. Y., gave some sound advice to his young auditors saying among other things, the following: "You are now standing on the threshold of great opportunities. In all the ages never so many avenues to success open to the young man of power, intellect and force of character. In all the countries of the earth there is not one in which these personal characteristics are in such demand as in these peaceful, orderly America of ours. You are not to be mere storehouses of fact learning, all covered with dust, but you are to learn to be men. Boundless possibilities are yours. You will either fail or attain the brightest success. It is not so much what you learn as what you become. Now is the time for character forming. You are to be great and successful or failures in life. You have that now which all the world envies—youth. It now rests with you to commute that with capacity for happiness and power to work well, and any best wishes go with you." What is good advice for the students at Hamilton is good for students everywhere. We hope our boys and girls will appropriate this advice, take it home with them and

TO OUR YOUNGER READERS.

The Breckenridge News has decided to give a column to its younger readers and opens it this week by publishing an interesting and delightful little story by Miss Florence Allen Fairleigh of Louisville. We trust you will appreciate and enjoy this feature. It will demand no little expense and attention on our part, but we are glad we are able to launch this Children's Department and will exercise our best efforts to make it attractive. Next week we will publish several Thanksgiving letters, and if you did not write one, enter our next contest which will be announced later.

In Trimble, Henry, Shelby and other counties says the Harrodsburg Democrat, the Democratic committees adopted stringent rules against the use of money or whisky by any candidate in their primary elections, and with excellent results. Last Saturday nearly forty Democratic candidates lined up at Richmond and took a solemn oath that they would not use money, whisky or any other improper influence in the primary election to be held in Madison County next Saturday, and that they would not allow their friends to do so. This looks like death to bribery and drunkenness in elections and the destruction of the "floaters"—a consumption most devoutly to be wished by people and candidates alike. It is to be hoped that the Mercer county Democratic committee and candidates will follow the excellent example set by our neighboring counties and eliminate these evils from our coming primary election.

If primary elections are held in Breckenridge county by either or both parties the above rules should be adopted. It is the only way to have clean, fair elections and to secure good clean men to fill the offices.

THE SHOW

Written by Florence Allen Fairleigh when She was 12 Years of Age.

Chapter I.
"And may I go too?" cried a tiny voice from within a tiny little person of three.
"No, Elsie, you will be frightened at the big elephants. They are just like the one in the parade and you know how they frightened you—no, darling, it is best for you to stay and let brother go; he will bring you home some nice pop-corn and a red balloon," said Mrs. Thomas, her mother.

So it was that Cecil Thomas with some other boy friends at half-past one put out for the dog and pony show. Mrs. Thomas wishing to go to see a very dear friend who was sick, left after a dinner, leaving little Elsie to take her afternoon nap alone except for Clara, her nurse, who had company in the kitchen. Elsie woke up, rubbed her eyes and looked around the room. "Where was there not even Clara," she said. "She ran along the pavement, singing like a little bird, thinking of the little monkeys and ponies she had seen in the parade. There! What was that? It was the band, and there was the top of the tent. She hurried on.

Chapter II.
The man who collected the tickets was older than Elsie, but he did not notice a little figure pass him and go into the tent where the animals were. Elsie looked carefully at them all and talked to them as if they were persons. After a while the band stopped and the people began to pour out. Poor little Elsie! She did not know which way to go! She turned! but the wrong way. She passed through an opening of the tent and found herself in a place where trunks and pink tights and spangly garments lay around. A trapeze girl entered and started in surprise.
"And how do you like the show, my little one?" she said.
"Oh, very much," she said, although she hadn't seen it at all, only the animals. The girl changed her present dress to a shabby skirt and vest and went out. Elsie liked this pretty lady somehow, although she could not just tell why. She examined the spangles on the waist and tights of interest till she grew tired, and seeing a pile of dirty rags behind a trunk, she climbed over and in the men's wardrobe was sound asleep.

Chapter III.
Elsie was awakened by a hoarse voice calling: "Look here, this Beatrice's kid!"
Elsie rubbed her eyes and looked annoyed then she remembered where she was and jumped up. The show was over and she must be going home. But how was she to get out? The man

To Aid a Farmer's Wife.

A wonderful way of saving your tablecloths and having strong and time in laundering it is to use plate cloths. These plate cloths two yards in length for the sides of the table and one yard for each end. These are made of cheap cotton toweling, eighteen inches in width, slightly starched, and pinned at corners when placed upon the table to prevent their slipping into un tidy positions. I make a centerpiece of a good grade of four of these I am able to use a table-cloth on my table for two or three weeks without being much soiled, and we live on a farm where it is considered a hard matter to keep table-cloths clean.

CARE OF EARTH ROADS.

How Clay Roadbed's Treatment Differs From One Composed of Sand.

On clay roads a thin layer of sand, gravel or ashes will prevent the sticking of clay to the roller or to the wheels of vehicles. Clay soils, as a rule, absorb water quite freely and often when saturated, but water does not pass through them readily. When used alone clay is the least desirable of all road material, but roads composed of clay can be treated with sand or small gravel from which a comparatively hard and compact mass is formed, which is nearly impervious to water. Material of this character found in the natural state commonly known as "hardpan" makes when properly applied a very solid and durable road. In soils composed of a mixture of sand, gravel and clay that is necessary to make a good road is to crown the surface and keep the ruts and holes filled and the ditches open and free.

While clay alone never makes a good road except in dry weather, and alone never makes a good road except in dry weather, and roads made of sand and gravel is improved the more deplorable its condition. Nothing will ruin a road quicker than to dig a ditch on each side and drain all the water away. The best way, therefore, to make such a road firm is to keep it constantly damp. This can be done by planting shade trees along its sides to prevent the evaporation of water or by growing upon the surface of such roads a thick turf, preferably Bermuda grass. Roads running through loose sand may be improved by mixing clay with the sand and slightly crowning the surface.

For the temporary improvement of sand or mud roads any strong fibrous substance, especially if it holds moisture, such as refuse of sugar cane or sorghum and even common straw, chaff, sawdust or pine needles, will be useful. Spent tea bark is sometimes beneficial, and wood shavings in any form is excellent. Enough sand or earth should be thrown over such roads to keep them damp and protect them from catching fire.

Earth is composed of small, irregular fragments which touch each other at points, leaving voids between. When the earth is broken up and pulverized these voids are almost equal in volume to the solid particles, and as a result the earth will absorb almost an equal volume of water. In the building or maintaining of earth roads it is therefore very desirable that these small, irregular particles be pressed into a solid mass as possible in order that surplus water may not pass in and destroy the stability of the road. This means that the ditches for carrying away the water are not distant from the fences that hedge in the highway. The roadbed is entirely too wide, says the American Agriculturalist. It cannot be sufficiently rounded toward the center, and as a result water does not run off with sufficient quickness. The temptation to speed by grading them thus is all the stronger since road graders have come into use. This result follows from the comparative quakiness with which the road can be moved by these machines. A distance of forty-two to forty-five feet between the outer edges of the ditches furnishes a roadbed

TAR WATERPROOF ROADS.

Expert Approves Binding Material For Glendane.

In an article summing up the work of the international roads congress recently held in Paris a contributor to Nature, the leading English scientific weekly, says:

"On a matter of common interest—that is, the substitution of tar or bituminous binding material in place of the water litters used to consolidate and hold together the road material—the congress practically gave a unanimous answer. This was to the effect that if the tar be put on in the correct quantity, and this quantity the smallest required to hold the individual stones of the road metal firmly in position, so that they never roll or move in relation to one another, and their upper surfaces are allowed to wear themselves down, it is not difficult to obtain at moderate expense a waterproof road which will be practically dustless and which need not be slippery."

"It appears certain also that the annual cost will be considerably less than the cost of the existing water wearing roads."

"It may be here remarked that, owing to the cautiousness and hence the reluctance of some of the most important of our road authorities, the true position of England, which now possesses the greatest lengths of carefully waterproofed roads of any country in the world, was not put forward so much as might have been the case."

"It was interesting to converse with American engineers, who on account of the importance of road development in America are studying this question very closely, and to hear from them how much more they could learn by visiting our English roads than anywhere in France, at any rate near the capital."

GOOD ROADS AS MONEY SAVER
 Lay Bernon by Curtis Hill on Gospel of Better Highways.

Curtis Hill, the state highway engineer, is sending out people to Missouri pamphlets for spreading the gospel of good roads. Here is a copy:

"It is right that people should fear a heavy road tax, but should not be deterred from becoming exhortant. A certain amount of taxes, however, is necessary to provide for public institutions and to improve the country. A low tax rate does not necessarily mean a public saving. Not the amount of money spent, but the judicious expenditure, is the standard of good roads."

"Road improvement should keep abreast with the growth of the state. No one internal improvement is more essential to the prosperity and advancement of the state than good highways. One reason the roads are not improved is because the people fear they cannot afford it."

"It must, however, be borne in mind that no road official, no matter how efficient he may be, can build roads without funds. Permit me to quote from a letter of one of our county highway engineers: 'We have some very attractive scenery in our county, but the only safe way to see it is in an old fashioned farm wagon or by stria.' When I first came to this county I could not understand why people with such good road material at hand had no better roads. This was twenty-five years ago, and at present the roads are worse than they were then. The reason is plain from the following figures: Total mileage of roads, about 2,000; road fund, $1,000.75, not quite $1 a mile for road maintenance."

The Dust Problem.
 After highway taxes have been once well tarred spraying on alternate years is said to keep them in good order.

Taxless roads as the remedy for the dust nuisance has appeared to Belgians so forcefully that they are talking of making quite a number of them.

The Royal Automobile Club of England will during the winter devote the most of its energies to a study of the dust problem.

All the experiments abroad have gone to show that it will be a problem of road rather than car construction that will finally solve the dust question.

Three years' experiments on the Lincoln park system of Chicago have shown that the best road, so far as a dustless condition and wearing surface are concerned, is one made of a limestone foundation, with a lightly rolled topsoil and top dressing.

Good Roads School.
 Georgia's State College of Agriculture will hold a good roads school in January. Attendances of all the counties and all persons interested will be invited to attend a five days' session at Athens, Ga., when a number of road building experts will deliver lectures during each morning. The afternoons will be taken up by inspections of roads in the vicinity. During the session a United States government expert will build a mile of road according to methods approved by the bureau of roads. Manufacturers have been invited to make exhibits of machinery.

Tarring of Roads.
 Road tarring is becoming a habit in the automobile districts of England. The old method of applying with hand brushes is now being abandoned in favor of the use of an apparatus which is nothing more or less than a giant air brush. The tar is in a large tank, and two men pump air into it, while a third goes about the road with a pipe blowing four outlets through which the air throws the tar in fine spray. This rapidly and thoroughly coats the road, and is then sprinkled, and the dust is laid for good.

At a Fiscal Court continued and held in and for Breckenridge county, at the court house in Hardinsburg, Kentucky, on Thursday, October 8, 1908.

Present, Hon. H. Deff. Moorman, presiding judge of the Breckenridge county court and the following named justices, of the peace, to-wit: John O'Reilly, T. M. Bates, H. G. Vessels, Charles H. Drury, J. T. McCamish and Frank Ruppert, being all the justices of the peace in commission.

Justices McCamish, Vessels and Drury, having been appointed as a committee to make a report and recommendations concerning Tar Fork bridge, abutments and approaches, and having read the commissioner's report, make the following report: "We find that the contract price of said bridge, $2,949, be paid to the Vincennes Bridge Co., that the contract price for approaches, $1,125, be paid to J. H. Barry, less a credit of $24 for oil and lumber for the job. Whereupon the recommendation of the said committee is approved and it is ordered by the court that the Commissioner and Receiver of Breckenridge county procure the sum of $3,111.83 by issuing the obligations of the county for said amount, bearing interest at the rate of 5 per centum per annum, payable annually, due and payable in one, two, three, four and five years after date or before, at the option of Breckenridge county, in such amounts as the said Commissioner and Receiver deems proper. And he will pay to the Vincennes Bridge Co., the sum of $2,949, and to John A. Barry the sum of $3,023.83 and take their receipts therefor and file the same with his report.

The Commissioner and Receiver of Breckenridge county is ordered and directed to procure the sums of money ordered by this term of court to be borrowed by him on behalf of the county, at the rate of 4 per cent interest if possible.

On motion of the county attorney it is ordered that the sheriff and county attorney, cause to be instituted against the Madisonville, Hartford and Eastern Railway Co., proper proceeding to recover back taxes for railroad ties located in this county. It is further ordered that the sheriff visit the different stations on the Fordville branch to ascertain the number of ties in the county.

This day came Lee Walls, Pauper Commissioner, and filed his report as such for the first half of the year, 1908, and the county judge ordered that a committee composed of Justices Bates, Vessels and Drury to examine the same and make recommendations.

A HOME WHERE PERUNA IS USED.

Residence of Mr. C. Hallock, Antwerp, Ohio.

CATARH OF THE HEAD.

Mr. C. Hallock, Antwerp, Ohio, writes: "My daughter, Alice, after taking three bottles of your Peruna, is entirely cured of catarrh of the head of two years standing.

"We have used Peruna as a general tonic, as well as for catarrh, and are well pleased with it, and recommend it to anybody who has catarrh. "Anybody wishing any information can write to me."

Could Take No Food.

Mr. William F. Burke, 1908 Frankford Ave., Philadelphia, Pa., writes: "On the 10th of February, 1901, I was taken with cramps that extended from just below my throat to the bottom of my stomach. They were so severe that my wife had to go for a doctor about two o'clock in the morning.

"I had from February until July of that year three doctors, and they were giving me medicine for kidney, liver and bladder trouble, and after taking all kinds of their mixtures, in the month of July I could neither eat nor drink. For three weeks I had not taken a morsel of food except in a liquid form. At the end of that time I could not drink milk or water except in small sips, which caused me great pain.

"I had given up all hope of living more than a week or two at most. I told my wife I thought I had catarrh of the stomach. She seemed to think so, and having read of Peruna I decided to give it a trial.

"I took several doses that evening, and for the first time in weeks rested fairly that night.

"I kept on using Peruna as I had started, and after using it three days and nights the pains in my chest and stomach disappeared, and they have never appeared since, and it will be two years this July."

Peruna Relieved All Symptoms.

Mr. J. C. Crumacker, R. T. 1, Kokomo, Ind., writes:

"I can say that I have nothing to complain of now. I feel well, rest well at night, have a good but moderate appetite, can eat almost any kind of food.

"I have no aches or pains anywhere, and can do some kind of work every day. I must say I can stand as much fatigue as I ever could, and feel good over it.

"The hemorrhage has yielded to Peruna, the grip has done the same, as well as pains and aches of all kinds.

"The roaring noise has entirely left my ears and head, my mind is clear, my recollection good, my bowels are regular, and I just simply feel easy all over.

"The cure of my case was surely a victory."

Catarth of Long Standing.

Mr. C. A. Resstrom, 673 Second St., Ogden, Utah, writes: "I take great personal interest in the work of Judge Wiley and his court. In a way he supervised his work and was frequently appealed to by Judge Wiley for advice as to procedure and other details. The lack of adequate laws hampered Judge Wiley, but by proceeding in accordance with the common law he quickly made the court effective. Within a few months after the court was organized Shanghai and other cities in China where conditions were such as to require it were thoroughly and drastically cleaned up. Shyster American lawyers were disbanded, so that the gamblers, disreputable women and other offenders against the law were deprived of legal support. The reputable American lawyers in good standing sided with Judge Wiley. Heavy fines and terms of imprisonment exercised a deterrent effect upon the lawbreakers, many of whom submitted and fled from the law and in promoting the same to account for their misdeeds.

When Mr. Taft was in Shanghai last fall he was heartily thanked and congratulated by the law-abiding Americans there for the part he had taken in removing the stigma from the American flag and restoring the good fame of the national name in the Orient. In his speech before the American association in China he paid a high tribute to Judge Wiley, saying in part:

"Our government was fortunate in the selection as the first judge of the court of a gentleman who had had four years' experience in the Orient as attorney general of the Philippines and who went to Shanghai with an intimate knowledge of the method of uniting in one administration the principles of the common law of the United States with the traditions and conditions of a foreign country. His policy in raising high the standard of administration and forcing the courts to vigorous prosecution of American violators of law, which eliminated from that community many undesirable characters, has done more to disgrace upon the name of America in the cities of China, cannot but commend itself to any one interested in the good name of the United States among the Chinese people and with our brethren of other countries who live in China."

He Rehabilitated Our National Reputation.

CHECKED COURT ABUSES.

Cleared the United States Banner From the Dishonor That American Criminals Had Brought Upon It. Readjusted Consular Service.

It was chiefly through the influence and at the instigation of Mr. Taft that the recent rehabilitation of our national reputation in China was accomplished by the establishment of the United States court in China. Until Mr. Taft became a prominent figure in the far east scandalous conditions had prevailed in Shanghai and other cities of the Orient, and the American flag was held up to the scorn of the world. The American subjects of the United States, men and women, had degraded the American flag and the American name in the eyes of the world by their conduct. The American government had been forced to conduct numerous nefarious enterprises. American shippers, gamblers and promoters of questionable schemes were rife in the Orient. The American flag was held up to the scorn of the world by their conduct. The American government had been forced to conduct numerous nefarious enterprises. American shippers, gamblers and promoters of questionable schemes were rife in the Orient. The American flag was held up to the scorn of the world by their conduct.

When he was at the head of the Philippine government in Manila Mr. Taft by his proximity to China soon appreciated the seriousness of the conditions existing in the Orient. He was standing in the eyes of the Chinese to which we were indifferently exposing ourselves by our failure to keep in check American criminals. He brought the matter to the attention of the state department and joined with Secretary Root, Representative Edwin Denby of Michigan, a son of the former United States minister to China; Charles Denby, another son, who is now consul general at Shanghai; Senator Spooner and some others in an endeavor to remedy the conditions. He exerted his influence to obtain the passage by congress of a bill creating the United States court for China. Leubus Redmond Wiley of Missouri, who had been Mr. Taft's attorney general in the Philippines, was named as judge.
